5 THINGS TO KNOW

WELCOME TO METRO BOSTON

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

I can't believe it's been a year since #MeToo spread like wildfire around the internet. So much has happened since I first saw women sharing their stories of sexual assault with that hashtag. Though the Me Too campaign officially began in 2007 (founded by Tarana Burke), this has undeniably been quite a year for the movement and for news related to sexual assault in general. Metro spoke with Boston Area Rape Crisis Center Executive Director Gina Scaramella as well as volunteers who work the crisis hotline to hear about the changes they've seen in the first year since #MeToo went viral. Read more inside and at metroboston.us.

1 RETALIATION THREATENED BY SAUDIS IF SANCTIONED

Saudi Arabia on Sunday warned against threats to punish it over last week's disappearance of journalist Jamal Khashoggi, as European and U.S. allies piled on pressure. Khashoggi, a U.S. resident and Washington Post columnist critical of Riyadh's policies, disappeared on Oct. 2 after entering the Saudi consulate in Istanbul. Turkey believes he was murdered and his body removed. Saudi Arabia has denied that. U.S. President Donald Trump has threatened "severe punishment" if it turns out Khashoggi was killed in the consulate, though he said Washington would be "punishing" itself if it halted military sales to Riyadh. "The Kingdom affirms its total rejection of any threats and attempts to undermine it, whether by threatening to impose economic sanctions, using political pressures, or repeating false accusations," the official Saudi Press Agency (SPA) quoted an unnamed official as saying. "The Kingdom also affirms that if it receives any action, it will respond with greater action, and that the Kingdom's economy has an influential and vital role in the global economy," the official added, without elaborating.

2 FORMER 'AI' CONTESTANT IN HEROIN DISTRIBUTION BUST

Former "American Idol" contestant Antonella Barba has been arrested for the distribution of heroin. The season 6 singer was booked on charges of felony drug distribution this past Thursday in Norfolk, Virginia, around 11:30 a.m. The 31-year-old was arrested for the possession of 100 grams or more and is currently being held in a Norfolk jail without bail. She is due in court on Monday. Barba appeared in the same season as "American Idol" winner Jordin Sparks. Barba made it into the top 16, but found herself voted out after racy pictures of the young performer appeared online. One of the photos featured Barba in a wet T-shirt posing at the World War II Memorial in Washington, D.C. Others showed Barba topless on the beach. "The pictures that were released of me — the ones that are of me — they are very personal and that is not how I intended to portray myself nor do I intend to portray myself that way in the future," Barba said at the time. The New Jersey native was also arrested back in 2011 for shoplifting at an Urban Outfitters in Manhattan.

3 FLORIDA PANHANDLE FACES MAJOR DESTRUCTION AFTER HURRICANE MICHAEL

Rev. John Blount holds a service outside of St. Andrew United Methodist Church on Sunday after it was damaged when Hurricane Michael passed through the area. The hurricane hit the Florida Panhandle as a Category 4 storm, causing massive damage, and claimed the lives of at least 18 people. For more on Hurricane Michael, turn to page 6.

4 RUBIO: US MUST TAKE ACTION OVER JOURNALIST

U.S. Sen. Marco Rubio said the United States must confront Saudi Arabia or risk losing credibility on human rights, if allegations are proven true that the Saudi government orchestrated the killing of journalist Jamal Khashoggi. "If we do not take action, including potentially arms sales, as a result of this, if it turns out to be what they say it is, then we are not going to be able to with a straight face or any credibility confront Putin or Assad or Maduro in Venezuela or frankly confront the Chinese and their human rights violations," Rubio said on Sunday in an interview with CBS's "Face the Nation." Khashoggi went missing after entering the Saudi consulate in Istanbul, Turkey, on Oct 2. to retrieve documents for his forthcoming marriage. Turkish officials and his fiancée said he never came out. Turkish sources have said they believe Khashoggi was killed inside the building and his body removed, allegations that Riyadh dismisses as baseless. President Donald Trump vowed to get to the bottom of what happened in a separate CBS interview, due to be aired Sunday, and said there would be "severe punishment" if it were found Khashoggi was killed by the Saudi government.

5 PA GOV CANDIDATE: 'STOMP ON OPPONENT'S FACE'

The Republican candidate for governor of Pennsylvania threatened to stomp on the face of his Democratic opponent in a video posted to social media on Friday and then walked back his comments, saying he made a mistake in his choice of words. Republican Scott Wagner is trailing well behind incumbent Democrat Tom Wolf in the polls ahead of the Nov. 6 election, and the video posted on Wagner's campaign Facebook page was part of an acrimonious battle in one of most populous U.S. states. "Gov. Wolf, let me tell you what, between now and Nov. 6, you'd better put a catcher's mask on your face because I'm going to stomp all over your face with golf spikes," Wolf said in the video. A few hours later, the video was taken down. Wagner explained: "I may have chosen a poor metaphor. I shouldn't have said what I said." On his Facebook page, Wolf encouraged people to share the original video if they agreed that "Scott Wagner should not be the governor of Pennsylvania." The video with Wagner's threat set off a social media storm and attracted the attention of a few prominent Republicans.

BARCC details impact of #MeToo for sexual assault survivors

The Boston Area Rape Crisis Center has seen some changes this year as the #MeToo movement went viral and gained momentum.

*A request for service is an individual request for counseling, legal advocacy, or case management. This does not include hotline calls or accompaniment to the hospital for a forensic exam.

On Oct. 15, 2017, a tweet by actress Alyssa Milano sparked a surge of responses, launching the hashtag #MeToo into the world as people across the country shared their stories of experiencing sexual assault.

It's been quite the year — from the charges against Harvey Weinstein to Dr. Christine Blasey Ford's testimony and Bill Cosby's sentencing. But even though the news may have been overwhelming to many, Gina Scaramella, executive director of the Boston Area Rape Crisis Center (BARCC), said it's been encouraging to see #MeToo grow into such a movement.

"I think the overwhelming feeling then was just, 'Is this going to be another flash?'" she said of seeing the #MeToo hashtag go viral a year ago. "[Then] there seemed to be tipping point. I don't know where I can say that was, but it just didn't let up, and it kept evolving into new industries and new takes on what this means and who's affected."

For BARCC, it's been a lot, and the impact of #MeToo is reflected in the crisis center's data.

From May to July of 2018, compared to the same time period in 2017, BARCC saw a 15 percent increase in the total number of people receiving services, a 39 percent jump in hotline calls and a 30 percent increase in counseling sessions. (BARCC also reported more major increases in the wake of the Kavanaugh hearings).

It's not just more people reaching out to BARCC, but more kinds of survivors, as well.

"We always have people of every age [reach out], but the hotline coordinator shared with me on [the day of Ford's hearing], she was talking with a lot of people that self-disclosed being in their 50s, 60s and 70s," Scaramella said. "Being in line with Dr. Ford, seeing themselves in her, and that was a real concrete and specific example of that, just in terms of people who think we can help them [being] different than who they were before."

BRIEF

Brandeis students evacuated after sodium cyanide discovered

College students at Brandeis University in Waltham were evacuated from the Foster Student Living Center on Friday after an undisclosed amount of sodium cyanide was discovered.

The local fire department was called to the scene around 2 p.m. to assess the situation. A short time later the Massachusetts HazMat arrived, identifying the substance in the dorm area that houses roughly 177 students.

Meanwhile, officials escorted more than 150 students out of the area as an added safety precaution. Students were brought to the gym and campus center.

"I was very anxious," student Marysa Massoia told 7News. "There were a bunch of fire trucks. I had no idea what was going on."

Other students were upset about their interrupted study time.

"I have an exam on Monday that I need to study for, and I would've loved to study for today," Victor Bianchi said. "Unfortunately, I cannot do that.

"The alarm went off, we all evacuated," Bianchi said. "We all got out and I was outside of my mod. I live in the upper mod, so I went down to mod 31, which is the lower mods, and there was just two fire trucks, two ambulances, a bunch of police officers."

"Waltham Police and Fire Departments and a Hazardous Materials team responded; the substance has been removed and there is no danger to the community. No one was injured," Julie Jette, a spokeswoman for the college, informed Patch in an email.

After a four-hour investigation, Brandeis University students were allowed back into their dorms. No injuries were reported. SARAH LUOMA

Hopes fade for more survivors of Hurricane Michael

At least 18 people have been killed due to the hurricane.

The hunt for missing people in the aftermath of Hurricane Michael early Sunday is turning into a search for the dead, as hope of finding more people alive fades in the Florida Panhandle, U.S. officials said.

"We're going into recovery mode, unfortunately," said Fire Chief Alex Baird of Panama City, one of the coastal Florida communities clobbered by the hurricane that made landfall Wednesday as a Category 4 storm, packing more than 140 mph winds and deadly storm surges.

"At sunrise, we'll start again on our search," Baird said. "We hope that we'll find more [survivors], but it's more and more doubtful."

President Donald Trump is expected to visit both Florida and Georgia early this week to inspect the damage, and the White House said late Saturday the president was fully committed to helping state and local agencies with the recovery.

The death toll of the storm reached at least 18 Saturday night and is expected to rise in the Southeast as rescuers go door-to-door in coastal communities in Florida, Georgia and the Carolinas.

Search and rescue volunteers have already located hundreds of people reported missing last week.

On Saturday, rescue crews heard cries for help and crowbarred into a mobile home crumpled by the storm in Panama City, freeing a mother and daughter, both diabetics who had been trapped in a closet without insulin for two days and were on the verge of diabetic shock, rescuers said.

A lack of food and water is among the most pressing issues for people reeling from the storm, said one volunteer who had been working in the Panama City area.

Rescue teams, hampered by power and telephone outages, used cadaver dogs, drones and heavy equipment to hunt for people in the rubble.

More than 1,700 search and rescue workers were deployed, including seven swift-water rescue teams and nearly 300 ambulances, Florida Gov. Rick Scott's office said. REUTERS

5 Fun things to do this week

Celebrate Halloween a little early, jam out with Justin Timberlake, and more.

MATT JUUL
matthew.juul@metro.us

Need some ideas to spice up your work week plans? We've got you covered. From public art displays to pop concerts, here are the best things to do in Boston this week.

Take a trip to the Seaport to check out these gorgeous new sculptures. MIKE DISKIN

Seaport sculptures

A kaleidoscope of sculptures have taken over the Seaport. As part of the recent HUBWeek festivities, Spanish artist Okuda San Miguel has brought his "Air Sea Land" installation to Boston, a collection of seven large-scale sculptures that pay tribute to the neighborhood's "coexistence of air, sea and land."

Now on display, Seaport Boulevard

"Shaun of the Dead"

Get in the Halloween spirit and head to the Coolidge Corner Theatre on Monday. The theater is hosting a special screening of the hilarious horror comedy "Shaun of the Dead." If you haven't seen the film before, it stars Simon Pegg and Nick Frost as they try to survive a zombie outbreak in the U.K. by heading to a pub with their pals.

Oct. 15, 7 p.m., Coolidge Corner Theatre, 290 Harvard St., Brookline, $10.75+, coolidge.org

Throwback to 1958

Take a trip down memory lane with the Museum of Science on Tuesday. As part of the Charles Hayden Planetarium 60th anniversary celebration, the museum is putting on a traditional planetarium show with a bit of a twist, as the event will serve as a showcase for how much things have changed in the worlds of astronomy and technology over the past six decades.

Oct. 16, 7 p.m., Charles Hayden Planetarium, Museum Of Science Driveway, mos.org

Halloween Adult Night

Adult Night returns to the Legoland Discovery Center on Wednesday. This month's festivities will be Halloween-themed, so expect a haunted Miniland tour, a haunted maze, "spooky" surprise boxes, build-off challenges and more.

Oct. 17, 7-9 p.m., Legoland Discovery Center, 598 Assembly Row, Somerville, $22.95, boston.legolanddiscoverycenter.com

'Arrow' stars welcome Ruby Rose's Batwoman with open arms

"Girl, get it."

matthew.juul@metro.us

Ahead of the "Arrow" season seven premiere Monday, star Katie Cassidy has only one piece of advice for newcomer Ruby Rose, who's set to play Batwoman in this year's crossover event with "Supergirl" and "The Flash."

"Girl, get it. That's all I have to say," Cassidy says. "Good for you, girl. Freaking get it."

The actress, who's been a mainstay in the "Arrowverse" since its inception, isn't the only one who's pumped about the addition of the Gotham hero. Fellow "Arrow" star Rick Gonzalez is also pretty excited about the upcoming "Elseworld" team-up episodes, and hopes that his character Rene, also known as the vigilante Wild Dog, gets a chance to tango with Batwoman on the small screen.

"I'm hoping Wild Dog gets to interact with Batwoman," says Gonzalez. "I remember my first crossover, I got to interact with Supergirl and The Flash. Just to see Wild Dog right there in the mix with them was iconic for me in my mind."

While Cassidy and Gonzalez can't wait to see Batwoman take up her cape and cowl, some fans weren't exactly happy with the casting of Rose when it was announced over the summer. The actress received a ton of backlash from angry social media users, who claimed that she wasn't lesbian, a trait that's been integral to the modern, Kate Kane version of Batwoman.

"Arrow" returns Monday night at 8 p.m. on the CW. ALL PHOTOS CW

Rose, who came out at 12 and describes herself as gender fluid, posted one final message addressing the issue before deleting her Twitter account, saying that she was often called "too gay" for many roles in the past. "How do y'all flip like that? I didn't change."

Controversy aside, Gonzalez believes Rose's Batwoman will be a beacon of hope to members of the LGBTQ community. The actor has nothing but praise for the CW and "Arrowverse" architect Greg Berlanti, as they've consistently featured diverse characters and cast members with each of the network's superhero series.

"I'm always a big fan of identity and using our platform to give people empowerment through identity," says Gonzalez. "If we only allow a certain identity to evolve or to succeed in TV and film, then we're kind of alienating the world. We're kind of saying that they don't matter and this is the only thing that matters.

"[It's] what I love about the CW and Warner Bros., DC and Greg Berlanti, who's championing not just the LGBTQ community, but Latinos and blacks and all races and cultures," he adds. "That's what he wants to see, diversity at its finest, because that's the real world."

Batwoman won't be the only hero joining the fray when the three-night crossover airs Dec. 9-11, as the event will also mark the debut of Bitsie Tulloch's Lois Lane and the return of Tyler Hoechlin's Superman. Although major details are being kept under wraps, "Elseworld" will bring together heroes from across the CW's DC multiverse.

"If Wild Dog can throw some jabs at Superman, then my bucket list is done," jokes Gonzalez. "Well, maybe not done, but it'll be up there."

Before we get to that point, Wild Dog and company must deal with the season 6 finale fallout.

"What I love about being on the show, season 7, we create a lot of story lines for each other and, at the end of the day, we don't throw anything away," says Gonzalez. "We still carry the weight of everything that we've been through, everything that we deal with, to make it super believable and make the fans invested."

Legal complaint puts student 'debt relief' companies in cross hairs, and borrowers can help make the case

Borrowers who say they were duped into paying for useless help in reducing their student debt now have a way to fight back. A New York public interest law firm has filed a class-action complaint against Equitable Acceptance Corp. and dozens of its affiliates.

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

The New York Legal Assistance Group is taking calls from customers who think they've been wronged. Attorneys have set up a hotline for affected borrowers: 212-659-6165.

The complaint, filed in federal court, claims that Equitable, SLF Center, Integra Student Solutions and up to 41 other companies lured borrowers into paying $39 or more a month for student loan adjustment they could get for free through the U.S. Department of Education.

The complaint alleges that Equitable and its partner companies "saddled" as many as 60,000 consumers "with additional, unnecessary debt on deceptive terms and at usurious rates."

The complaint says Minnesota-based Equitable, which is under investigation by the Federal Trade Commission, "masterminded" the plan.

ALL PHOTOS ISTOCK

Equitable says the allegations are without merit. They are based on the "horribly skewed perspectives of the process and the specific accounts in question," says Daniel D. Hill, Equitable's general counsel.

Equitable entered the loan adjustment business years after it had been established, he says. "To say that we're behind this, coordinating and masterminding this, is just nonsense."

A 'worthless' service

The companies target struggling borrowers, promising loan forgiveness they "do not and cannot actually offer," the complaint says. It says Equitable directs its partners to sell this "worthless" service for $1,300.

Many consumers can't afford to pay that much in advance, and upfront fees are illegal.

So the debt companies offer a "payment plan," steering borrowers to Equitable to complete the sale, the lawsuit alleges.

Equitable generates a new loan to cover the charges in the form of a $1,300 line of credit, the suit says.

After fees and interest, the contract can cost borrowers $1,800 or more over several years. Consumers who stop paying can end up with damaged credit.

Hundreds of borrowers have filed complaints against Equitable with the Better Business Bureau and Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, NerdWallet reported in June. Many say they were told they were reducing their student loans, not incurring a new loan at 20% interest.

Denying the allegations

Equitable denies misleading or deceiving consumers. It says it simply purchases the contracts from student debt companies and has no knowledge of the alleged transgressions.

Equitable requires its partner companies to record consumers acknowledging that they understand the services they are agreeing to and Equitable's role in financing the agreement, Hill says. Equitable will not purchase a consumer contract until it receives that verification.

Equitable's loans have benefited thousands of borrowers, Hill says, including many who have had their loans forgiven.

Hill says Equitable has canceled the contracts to help several hundred customers who claimed they were scammed. He encourages dissatisfied consumers to contact the company if they are having problems.

Equitable has had partnerships with 43 student debt companies. It has stopped working with all but a few, Hill says.

Many of those companies have gone out of business in response to government scrutiny of the student debt business, he says. NerdWallet published a list last year of more than 130 student debt adjustment companies that have faced legal action by state or federal agencies or have low ratings from the Better Business Bureau.

Perpetuating the problem?

The FTC started investigating Equitable in summer 2017. Investigators have questioned it about an increase in consumer complaints, its relationship with various student debt companies and how much revenue it has received from certain companies.

The new complaint, filed in U.S. District Court in New York by New York Legal Assistance Group and Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan, a business litigation firm, is not yet certified to move forward as a class action.

The complaint suggests that Equitable plays a leading role in the problems besetting the student "debt relief" industry. Among other things, the complaint says Equitable:

"Uses threats of negative credit reporting to induce Borrowers to continue making payments;" Coordinates with partners, which "need EAC's financing to get otherwise unattainable up-front payments that fund their operations;" "Omits numerous pieces of information that are mandated by law" in its credit contracts.

Equitable's agreements do not include the actual amount financed under the contract, the dollar amount of the finance charge or the dollar amount of the total payments borrowers must make, the complaint says.

Equitable denies that its contracts are deceptive or that they exclude information required by law.

Pastrnak coming into his own as an NHL superstar

The 22-year-old Pastrnak already has seven goals for the Bruins on the young season.

RICHARD SLATE

It's hard to believe but this is Bruins right wing David Pastrnak's fifth season in the NHL after debuting with Boston in 2014-15. Still, he's only 22 years old, and as we saw in last spring's playoffs, he is knocking on the door of superstardom. In 12 playoff games against Toronto and Tampa Bay, he amassed a highly impressive six goals and 14 assists.

A full offseason, with more time for opposing teams to devise ways to stop him, hasn't fazed him in the least bit as he's sped out of the gate this fall with seven goals (second-most in the NHL) and two assists in Boston's (4-1-0) first five games.

Unlike the NFL or NBA, where the stars are almost their own entities, it's harder for NHL players to make their mark in terms of fame outside of their sport. But Pasta seems like the rare NHL-er who could cross over based on his fun-loving nature.

Bruins head coach Bruce Cassidy came about at the perfect time in Pastrnak's professional career as rather than inhibit his creativity, he seems to appreciate it and wants to make it work. It's tough to imagine that former B's head coach Claude Julien would have done the same as he seemingly stunted the growth of former Bruins Phil Kessel and Tyler Seguin — who turned into stars once they left Boston. It also helps that unlike Kessel and Seguin, who have never really developed an all-around game, Pastrnak seems much more willing to do the little things that help teams win. The Brad Marchand-Patrice Bergeron-Pastrnak forward line remains the best one in the league, and it's no surprise when you consider how seriously Pasta's linemates take all aspects of their sport.

"He's growing up," noted Cassidy after Pastrnak netted both his 100th career NHL goal and his second hat trick in Saturday's 8-2 blowout of Detroit (0-3-2) at TD Garden. "He's trying to get everyone involved and that's part of being a good teammate. In the second period he had a turnover and he really hustled back. Parts of his game are growing and his shot is, too."

A native of the Czech Republic, English isn't Pastrnak's first language but he's already picked it up well enough to make him one of the go-to Bruins in the locker room for a unique quote. Oftentimes, he leaves the media laughing with his quirky humor that's only accentuated by his chipped tooth, mop of hair and sleeve of tattoos. After most games so far this season he can be found wearing a Celtics warmup jersey, and he's a must-follow on Twitter for his Boston sports observations and general chirps.

Pastrnak has gotten this far by focusing on the details, so he's not going to change his process at this point.

"I just go out there and play hockey and enjoy every moment on the ice," he said. "I'm trying to get better every practice and every game and just having fun. I love the game and I'm not focusing on if I'm going to score a goal or three."

He's already one of the most offensively gifted Bruins in franchise history as evidenced by incredible plays like his goal vs. Edmonton and the effortless hat trick against the Red Wings. For that reason alone, there's plenty to be excited about when it comes to Pastrnak's career in black and gold.

Aries Don't fret over what others do. Pour your energy into something that makes you feel good about who you are and what you can accomplish. Don't let anger stop you from your goals.

Taurus A change is heading your way. Don't expect to please everyone. Do what suits your needs, and live life your way. Let experience be your guide.

Gemini Don't stop until you have taken care of your responsibilities. You'll be judged by what you do, so put in the effort and make everything you do count.

Cancer Don't hesitate when you should be moving forward and accomplishing all you can. If you expand your interests, skills and friendships, good results and rewards will be yours.

Leo Don't let the actions of others get to you. Look at what you can accomplish, and head in a direction that will give you the opportunity to do what you do best.

Virgo Tie up loose ends and plan to take on new endeavors. A positive change in the way you treat friends and family will lead to greater popularity and support.

Libra Consider what others want, but don't forgo your own desires just to avoid discord. Sometimes it pays to stick up for who you are and what you want.

Scorpio Participate in events that stimulate your mind and encourage you to take on projects that will test your skills. Spend less time worrying and more time doing something constructive.

Sagittarius Don't assume that everyone is on your side. Sharing your plans or feelings with someone at work or who is influential in your community will put you in a precarious position.

Capricorn If you aren't vocal about the way you feel, it will be difficult to bring about the changes that will make you happy. Taking an assertive role will encourage others to look up to you.

Aquarius Anger will not help you solve a problem you have with someone. If you don't want to take part in something or you disagree with what someone is doing, you must walk away.

Pisces You hold the key to your success. You have options and the support of someone who can help you reach your goal. Love, romance and a joint effort will change your life. EUGENIA LAST
